The Daily Gazetteer.

THURSDAY, MAY 10 1739. No. 1210.

To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR, Bath, May 2. 1739.

IF ever you had the Misfortune to be order'd hither in the Winter Season, after the Disciples of Galen had prescrib'd away your Strength and drain'd your Purse, you know that we Gentry of the Pump subsist chiefly on pure Element and Politicks. For, as the Chit-Chat of the Place affords not sufficient Nourishment in a Dearth of the Beau Monde, we are forced to have Recourse to you Daily and Weekly Authors, till the Increase of Company furnishes Matter for Domestick Scandal To this End, we are obliged to be at the Expence of all the Papers that come out, which, by the bye, occasions no inconsiderable Sinking in Pockets already rifled by the Quacks of the Profession. As I am one of this unhappy Number, you may believe I was not a little elated at the late Arrival of some of our most distinguish'd modern Patriots, who, out of a tender Regard to their Constituents, are come hither to recruit their exhausted Spirits, and lay in a fresh Stock against the next Campaign, or even the Fag-End of this; for you know Veterans are often known to rally after a Defeat, when least such an Onset is apprehended by the Victorious.

THEY were no sooner arriv'd, but it was whisper'd in the Pump-Room, that we might now save the Expence of Papers, for that we should have political Nurture in plenty from the New-Comers. But, Sir, we were most grossly disappointed; for, except Sighs, wry Faces, and a few significant Shrugs, all we were able to extort from our absenting Trustees was, that Mr. Common Sense wou'd soon publish their Reasons, and justify their Conduct.

THIS was the Language at their Arrival; but whether or no the unanswer'd Charge lately exhibited against the Author of that Journal has deterr'd them from trusting their Cause to so stigmatiz'd an Author I can't say; but 'tis certain their Note is chang'd since the Arrival of your Paper of the 17th of last Month. We have been since told, that the necessary Justification will be by a cleaner Hand, and at a more safe and convenient Season.

I don't know what Season the recruiting Patriots may think more safe or convenient than the present; but in the Opinion of our Company at the Pump, it became them to give immediate Satisfaction for a Conduct as injurious to their Constituents as 'twas extraordinary and unprecedented. For as 'tis scarce possible they should use Terms more harsh and opprobious in a present or future Justification, than they and their Weekly Advocates had used with Impunity for above Twelve Years last past, 'tis unreasonable to conclude that they defer it rather for want of adequate Matter than out of any Dread of either the Legislative or Ministerial Powers, which have been of late Years exerted with unparallell'd Lenity; a Lenity which is justly apprehended to have been productive of that dangerous Spirit of Faction which is but too obviously seen and repined at by the Virtuous and Loyal.

'TIS not pretended, that our own Records mention any thing like a Secession by a Part of the Representatives of the People; nor have any of those Secessions we read of, by the Romans, any Affinity to the present. The first of these, which was to the Sacred Mountain, was occasion'd by the intolerable Usury and Extortion of the Patricians. As there is not at present so much as a Shadow of any such Grievance, this Procedure of the Roman Commonalty can't be drawn into Example, any more than the second Secession to Mount Adventure during the Influence of the Decemviri, when the Hardships complain'd of by the Plebeians was, that the Tribunician Magistracy, and the Benefit of Appealing, had been wrested from the Commons. There was a third, to procure the Liberty of Intermarrying with the Patrician Families, and to participate with them the highest Dignities of the Commonwealth. As it would be impertinent to attempt proving what every Man in the Nation knows to be true, that there is not the least Colour for a Complaint of Grievances of this Complexion, I shall only observe in the general, that the Roman Secessions bear no Sort of Resemblance to that we see at present, either as to the Cause, or Persons withdrawing.

THE Secessions at Rome were on account of real, not pretended Grievances: They were by the Commonalty, not by their Representatives, nor by Senators. At Rome, the withdrawn Commons publish'd their Grievances; but with us, Grievances are only insinuated by Weekly Scriblers that merit neither Credit nor Attention. The Disappointment of Individuals, personal Pique and Resentment, had no Share in the Roman Secessions; but what impartial, honest Man will say that these are not the principal Motives of the British?

BUT where are our absenting Patriots justify'd in their present Conduct from the Records of Antiquity? I don't remember that either the Greek or Roman Historians celebrate any for deserting the Cause of Liberty; on the contrary, they bestow the highest Encomiums on those that had firmly stood the Shock of Power, and wrestled to the last with the Invaders of Liberty: Nay more, we find Laws to have been made by the wisest amongst the Antients, for stigmatizing those that should withdraw from their Duty to the Publick in Times of Danger, or when an Invasion of Freedom was apprehended. Solon, the Athenian, made a particular Law to this Purpose; upon which, 'tis observed by Plutarch, That private Men should not so regard their own Affairs, and the Security of their Persons, as to abandon their Concern and Passion for the Publick; nor to think it wise Caution not to participate in the Miseries and Misfortunes of their Country. —— Supposing then, there were actual Grievances; there were Designs on the national Freedom; there were even Steps made that might warrant such an Apprehension as should alarm the Friends of Liberty; supposing, I say, all this were true, could it be thought consistent with that Duty a virtuous Man owes to the Publick, to withdraw, and with Plutarch, abandon his Concern and Passion for that Publick?

IF then a Man is bound in Duty not to abandon his Concern and Passion for the Publick, even when there are real Dangers, real Invasions on the Liberties of his Country, how much more is he bound not to abandon her, or withdraw himself from the Execution of a publick Trust, when there are no Dangers but such as are suggested by her secret Enemies, personal Pique, and private Ambition? If it be incumbent on private Persons to aid their Country with their Counsel, and, even with their Fortunes, how much more are they, constituted by publick Suffrage, obliged not to withdraw from the Exercise of a Trust reposed in them for the publick Weal? In vain shall they plead an Improbability of faithfully discharging their Trust; in vain shall they plead an Impotence of Power; no Inability, but want of Health, can be deem'd a Plea with those that have a Right to insist upon their Attendance, a Demission, or Expulsion that they may be at Liberty to make a second Choice.

CAN it be supposed, that Men elected to a Legislative Trust, can think so far to impose on the Understanding of their Constituents, as to found their Non-Attendance on an Insinuation of the superior Power of a Majority? If ever such absurd Doctrine should take Place, there would be an End of Parliaments, there would be an End of the Constitution itself. And as Anarchy and Confusion must be the natural Consequences of such Doctrine, 'tis plain, that where and whenever it is propagated, such Consequences must be in View; nor could all the Oratory of Greece and Rome justify those whose Conduct should obviously, as in the present Case, subject themselves to an Accusation of designing to subvert the Constitution of their Country.

WHAT the Itinerant Legislators mean by insinuateing that their Justification will appear by a cleaner Hand than Common Sense, we can't conjecture; but if they intend it shall be undertaken by his doughty Colleague, the moral Caleb, our Element-Bibbers can't persuade ourselves, that they can think his Hand less defiled than his Associates, if they cast their all-discerning Eyes on the Equivocating D'Anvers's Portrait as drawn in the Daily Advertiser of the 21st of last Month by some worthy Friend to the late Mr. Strutt. One, surely, detected in so notorious a Falsehood and Breach of Friendship, as the Author of the Craftsman is charged with in that Advertiser, can never be supposed to have clean Hands But, probably, the Uniform and virtuous Dissertator upon Parties, will be the Orator on this critical Occasion.

IF one were to judge of the Views and Virtue of our abdicating Patriots by the late authentick Accounts of the Principles and Morals of their weekly Advocates, or by the known Steadiness and Morality of their Cicero, the noble Dissertator, I am thinking what a contemptible Opinion he must entertain of them: For sure there never before were a Set of Men, pretending to Patriotism, that had made a less judicious Choice of scribling Trumpeters. And, I can't help thinking, that they themselves are at last become sensible of their Error, from their not venturing to trust the Defence of their late Conduct to such stigmatiz'd, inconsistent Writers.

I am, SIR,

Your most humble Servant,

Y. Z.

Vienna, April 21. O. S.

ORDERS having been issued for a Fortnight past to make Preparations here for proclaiming a Peace, it has been expected Day after Day; but now we are assured that 'tis put off for a Fortnight, or at least till 'tis positively known what Day 'tis to be done at Paris. The Pope's Nuncio has assured the Emperor in a private Audience, that his Holiness being obliged, for the Sake of Religion, to contribute to the Success of the War against the Turks, he would cause a considerable Sum to be remitted hither towards defraying the Expences of the next Campaign; which Sum, 'tis said, will amount to about 100,000 Crowns; and that the Clergy of the hereditary Dominions will furnish near a Million of Florins By the Help of these Sums, those which are furnish'd by the Jews of Prague, and those borrow'd in Foreign Countries, the Chamber of the Finances will be enabled, together with the other Funds, to provide for all the Expences of the ensuing Campaign.
